Pictorial Edition Editor and Editress,
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Bickers.

ANY EDITOR WANTING AN EDITION OF THIS KIND, IT WILL NOT COST HIM A CENT.

Address me at FOREST HILL, TENN., for Terms and Conditions. I make a Specialty of Making these Pictorial Issues for Daily and Weekly Newspapers. I Edited and Designed this Edition—Exclusively own my Instruments and do my own Photographing.

MR. R. E. HUGHES, Secretary Kentucky Exhibit Association World's Fair, St. Louis, 1904, who called on me recently, says without fail send him a copy of each town I have gotten issues of this kind out for, to be exhibited in the Kentucky Building. He says it is the finest enterprise in the State to-day. I will respond to his request.

The advantages of these editions to newspapers are: They secure them more advertising, get them more subscribers and get their editors before the world as enterprising, hustling newspaper men. These issues are printed on heavy enameled white paper, with from two to three hundred half tones of people and street scenes in the cities and towns where they are made. The covers are handsomely lithographed in bright colors and printed by the largest publishers in the United States. These editions contain all the prominent men and women in your community, also all noted events. Issues of this kind are the thing to boom a newspaper and communities.

Any newspaper editor wanting an edition of this kind should address Mr. Bickers, Forest Hill, Tenn., for terms and conditions.

THE above picture is a correct likeness of William H. Bickers, special editor of the local newspapers. For the past twelve years he has devoted his entire time to this class of work. He is a young man, only thirty-one years of age, born and reared in Shelby county, in his father's country home, near Memphis, Tenn., where his father and mother and four brothers yet reside. In his past life he has been connected with some of the largest firms in the world. For three years he was book-keeper for the Standard Oil Co., office Memphis, Tenn., resigning that position in 1889 to accept a position with the Home Aid Benevolent Association, of Mobile, Ala., as Secretary and Traveling Auditor. During the late war he went to the West India Islands as official photographer for one of the largest newspapers in the United States—The New York World—which gives him advantages over the majority of newspaper men with that kind of newspaper experience. Mr. Bickers has served in every capacity about a newspaper, from devil up to editorial chair, learning the trade as a practical man when a mere boy of twelve years of age on the old "Tennessee Baptist," of Memphis, Tenn., edited and owned by Rev. J. R. Graves. He is a moral business young man, and would be a credit to any newspaper wanting an edition of this kind; they will do well to secure Mr. Bickers, because he is well equipped for this class of work, being an editor and photographer together. His work is the very finest, which you will see by these editions. Mr. Bickers holds clippings from other newspapers to verify this statement.

Mrs. Genon Bickers, who ably helps her husband in this class of newspaper work, was born and reared in Monroe county, near Gamaliel, Tenn., where her father was Sheriff of Monroe county. She was present at the General Assembly when Mr. Bickers was elected. She has traveled all over the South, and visited the largest and most famous cities of the South, New Orleans, St. Louis, and Memphis. Mr. Bickers in this class of work, renders herself very beneficial to the community.

THE CAPITAL OF CRITTENDEN COUNTY

What Has Been Done In the Past Few Years In the Mineral Line.

The County of Crittenden a Mass of Lead,
Zinc and Fluor Spar.

Millions of Pounds of Zinc Ores and Fluor
Spar, Shipped Monthly.

The Fissure Veins Are the Greatest Known

Barites, Ochres, Kadlin, Glass Sand, Fire
Clays In Massive Deposits.

The Mining, Agricultural, Fruit Raising, Financial, Professional and Religious Outlook.

THE GOVERNMENT will make its Report next Spring on Crittenden County Mineral Developments, and it is expected Capitalists will rush here as they did to Beaumont, Texas, four years ago.

MARION, the county seat of Crittenden county, is a beautiful, prosperous and growing little city, situated in the finest undeveloped coal, oil and mineral lands in the United States.

In this county is located several spar, zinc, lead and other ore mines, that are now in operation; capitalists' attention should be attracted this way.

We have a few enterprising men who are working at these undeveloped mines, but many more such men are needed! Far beneath the rugged, barren, waste land, that looks too poor to grow green briars, is hidden a vast amount of wealth, and some day in the near future, this barren, desolated looking clay will be worth more than the most fertile lands of the valleys.

The past decade has seen much accomplished in the way of developing this county's natural resources in both mineral and agricultural wealth. Within the last few months capitalists have purchased and leased large tracks of land for mineral purposes, and the near future bids fair to be a prosperous era for this county.

Situated as Marion is, makes it very convenient to the shippers,—on one side the Illinois Central, and the navigable waters of the Ohio, the Cumberland, the Tennessee and Tradewater bounds the others.

This little city has located within its limits several churches—the Baptist, Methodist, Cumberland Presbyterian, Presbyterian and Christian, besides the colored people have churches here. These houses compare very favorably with other cities of this size and larger, and there is no cause for not attending church every Sunday and hearing a good sermon.

Electric lights, telephone exchange, banks, etc., add much to the comfort and convenience of the citizens of Marion, and commend it to the outside world as a progressive, wide-awake, up-to-date city.

Crittenden county has a latitude whose climate is the most salubrious to be found in the temperate zone. The topography of the county and the elevation above the sea level are such as to protect the inhabitants from extreme climatic changes. From the summit of her little mountains the purest ozone may be inhaled by those who are in search of thelixir of life. From the heart of the earth her springs issue forth like a poem in nature, sparkling in their own purity and imparting life and health to all who touch their crystal fluids.

The great advantages derived from the mineral and agricultural wealth of the county are fully complemented by the energy of the people.

The surface of the county is undulating and diversified. The lands spread out like vast plains, while the higher altitude partakes much of diminutive mountains, which hold in their grasp ores and spars that are making the county famous.

The county is noted for the diversity of her crops. The staple products are wheat, corn, tobacco and other cereals, fruits and vegetables that fully establish the county's reputation in the world of agriculture. A decade of advancement has done much for the farmers of the county. Quick to appreciate the advantages of improved machinery of scientific methods, the yeomanry of Crittenden county are reaping a just reward for their diligence and frugality. Many thousands of pounds of tobacco and as many bushels of wheat and corn, with vast consignments of live stock, represents Crittenden county's contribution to the commercial world.

Crittenden county can boast of the finest citizenship of the State. The peaceful pursuits of the people, together with their old-time Southern hospitality, has gained for them the moral esteem of all good religious people.

The educational standard has steadily advanced for a number of years and the teacher of to-day is far superior to the master of ten years ago. The higher education of Christian life has grown apace with secular learning, and the church bell mingles with laughter of children fresh from school. The beneficent influence of church and school is best demonstrated by the absence of crime within the borders of the county. This town can boast of a fine school of 400 pupils and of several well-equipped teachers.

Mineral Resources.

It seems as though fortune never tires of showering favors on its favorites, and the party that bought nine acres of land on the Columbia vein some months ago was very fortunate. The $2,700 even then seemed an outrageous price for this almost barren hill-side on which but one showing of zinc and lead ore was visible. On this work commenced several weeks ago. The visible ore was soon mined, rich, of course, but very early exhausted. A solid limestone rock was the foundation upon which this ore rested. Satisfied that the visible ore was simply an overflow from the main body, a shaft was driven down a few feet distant and the mine ore body was opened up and its wonderful richness is almost beyond belief. In the Court-de-Alenes we know of lead ore being solid for several feet in width, but this is the first showing in this country of a four foot streak of solid ore. When one considers that quartz rock weighs 166 pounds to the cubic foot, and that Galena is nearly three times as heavy, a four foot body of lead ore, four feet each way, means some 29,440 pounds, or nearly 15 tons; worth in St. Louis to-day nearly $8,000.00. This is the new property being opened by parties on the Columbia vein, a short distance from the Crittenden Hotel, and a property which, from the very make-up of Crittenden County ore bodies may be duplicated twenty times in the next twelve months in various portions of the County. Large beds of amber and yellow ochre of very fine quality occurs about five miles from Marion, other cheap pigments could be manufactured from soft chester shales which are exposed at several points, iron ores of several varieties occur at many points. These ores are limonite brown ores and are precisely like those of Western Tennessee and of the region known as between the rivers of Kentucky. It may be stated without fear of contradiction that this district contains more deposits of lead, zinc, fluor spar and barite than any other section of the State.

CRITTENDEN PRESS EDITOR AND PUBLISHER

The zinc and lead deposits invariably occur in the line of the fractures. They are, therefore, in the true fissure veins—the origin of which was in no way dependent upon shrinkage of the strata nor to the eroding or cavity making effect upon limestone. On the contrary, these fissures are of deep-seated origin, having resulted from convulsive movements of the earth's crust, whereby it was produced and the country rock for some distance on one side of the dislocation either shoved up or thrown down. The limestone that has been counted as the principle source of the metals in this region are the Princeton and St. Louis, having an aggregate thickness of no less than 500 feet. These veins should be productive to a depth of 800 to 900 feet. Valuable deposits may be discovered at almost any point, but experience teaches us that the chances for finding them at the surface are far the best where limestone occurs on one or both sides of the fault. Massive snow-white Barite occurs in twenty foot veins and can be mined very cheaply as it lies on a railroad.

I think this is enough to prove that this district is unusually rich in mineral deposits. Among the first steps to be recommended are greatly increased facilities for transportation, not only in the railways but county roads, for obvious reasons this point can not be too strongly urged. The development of the mineral deposits should be along two natural lines. In the first, rival of the coal industries go hand in hand. These alone would be of great consequence in the progress of the county. In the second line, the development of the lead, zinc, barites and fluor spar deposits; ochres and other cheap pigment, are associated. A large plant might be established along the river somewhere where the various products might be worked up. All sorts of paints could be manufactured there. Having the crude material and transportation close at hand, this enterprise, if properly conducted, could scarcely fail to be remunerative.

Barite is a very heavy white mineral and used largely in the adulteration of white lead, and is scarcely ever found without its being somewhat stained or discolored from its connection with earthy or iron substances. The mineral needs to be carefully assorted, crushed and treated to a sulphuric acid bath to remove the stains. It is then ground to an impalpable powder, floated on water or in air the residue being reground and again floated. The fine material can be packed in barrels and shipped; in Chicago it sells for about $15 per ton. Our district has several notable deposits of sparkling whiteness and superior to most other sections. Just south of Mexico on the Illinois Central R. R. are three massive veins of this beautiful mineral without any line in the deposits. Some one is needed to open these veins and find a gold mine in value.
